Nurseketeers Newsletter

As 2020 moves into the fourth quarter and we begin to focus on Thanksgiving, Christmas and the new year, we should take the time to review our Moments to Remember so far in 2020. It has most certainly been a memorable year, but what has it meant specifically for you?

Compelling writing stimulates moments to remember, either from the pages as we read, or from our own lives.

We don't need to wait for a brush with death to review our lives for opportunities for improvement.

Facing Mortality

Sometimes it's necessary to face mortality, and make the best decisions left to us.

Against the World

Gram lifted her eyes to meet Robin's and the sadness in them burst Robin's bubble of enthusiasm. She cocked her head, and whispered, "What is it? Tell me."

Still holding one of Aileen's hands in both of her own, Gram began, "Nothing is certain," she sighed, "but they want us to know that they are not hopeful. Aileen's condition has not improved at all, even after they put in the shunt to relieve the pressure. They said that they almost lost her twice during the procedure."

"But she could wake up, right?" Robin asked.

"She could," Gram conceded. "We'll just have to be patient and hope for the best."

Robin moved to the other side of the
